

DIEGO FEURER
P O R T F O L I O

"I draw my inspiration from the rhythmic images and the signs of time left by nature and from the objects around me and their details.
I converge these sensations in the creation of a murrina and then repeat these murrini to blow my pieces."

Born February, 10, 1955 in St. Gallen, Switzerland.
Diego Feuerer lives and works in Tesserete, Switzerland.

Originally a CAMS – operator for Swiss TV, Feuerer's artistic eye led to his fascination with glass. In 1980, he began his career in art glass by creating artistic stained-glass windows. In the early 1990's, he advanced his education in glass by attending fusing seminars with various artists, including Giles Bettison, Matthew Curtis, Linda Ethier and Rudi Gritsch.

He began another collaboration creating artistic glass windows with Fra Roberto, an important Swiss artist, in the 1980s which continues today. Feuerer received a major commission in 1999 from the Swiss Office of Construction and Logistics to create a glass fused ceiling for a multipurpose hall.

The work is 45 square meter in size and is comprised of 60 panels (each 61cm x 122cm) and weighs 3 tons.

It was also in the 1990's that Feuerer started to blow glass, attending various workshops with such renowned artists as Giles Bettison. In addition to his own work, he assists other artists in the realization of their works of art.

In 1998 he established his glass blowing studio in Tesserete, Switzerland.

In his latest work, Feuerer developed an entirely original form of murrine, the glass mosaic. This process allows him to fade his colors, giving a more painterly effect to his work, which was not previously possible with normal murrine techniques.
